

Partners Forum 2014 Round Up

Building a movement for Science in Africa

This year, the PEI Partners Forum has continued to take the case for investment in advanced science to Governments and policy-makers across Africa and around the world. With the support of our partners, we have engaged audiences across civil society, business and academia, to ensure that our campaign is targeted but broad-based, and that everyone, from students to CEO, can play their own part.

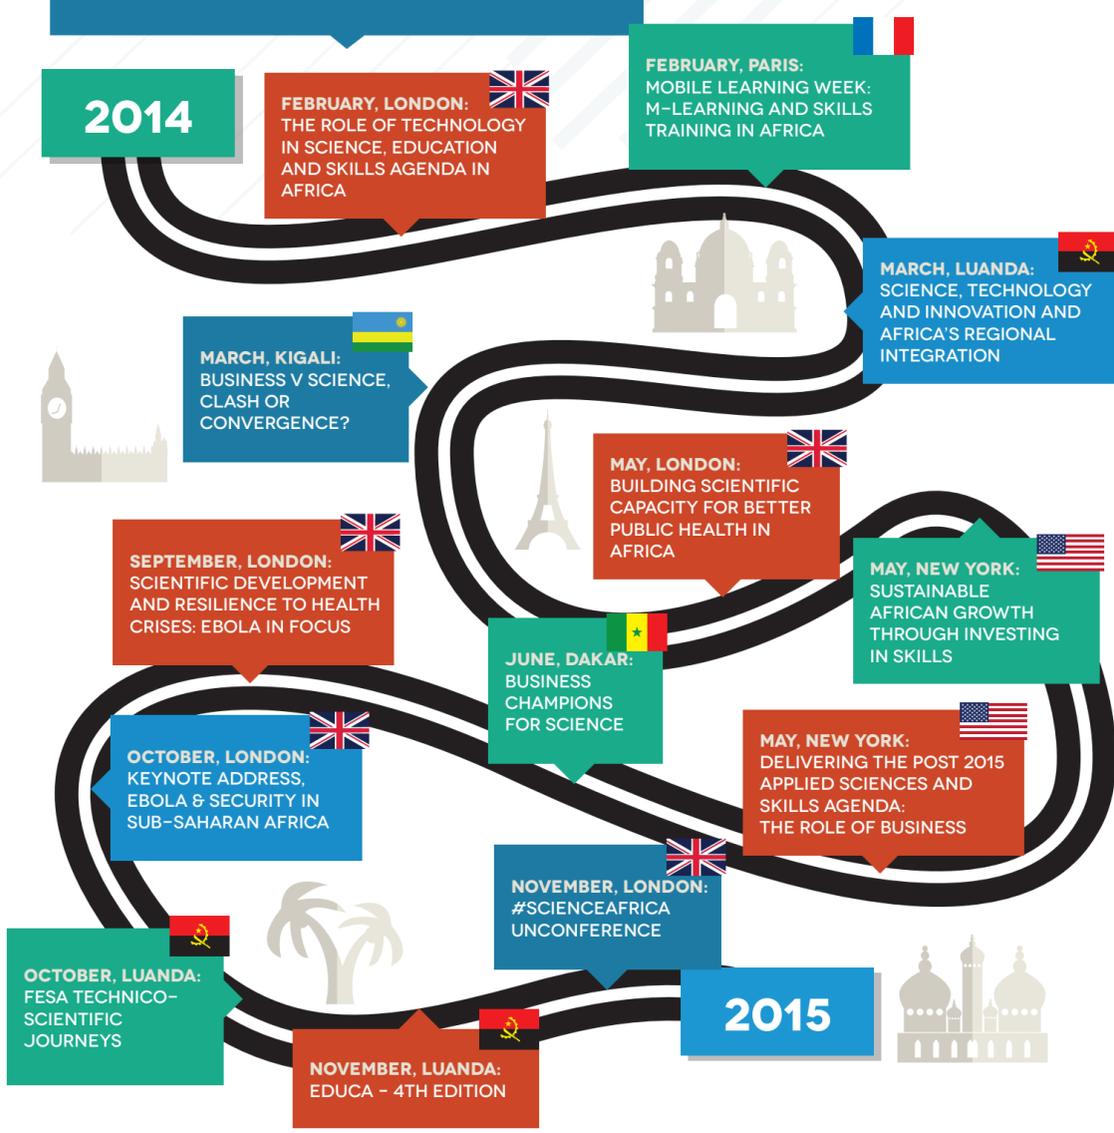

Through our live events and online campaigning, the PEI Partners is committed to calling for scientific emancipation of Africa. Increasing investment and focus on Africa's scientific and technological sectors has the potential, we believe, to transform the future of the continent to the benefit of all.

We owe our partners a huge thank you for sharing our vision and belief in Africa's scientific development, and to committing to the financial support of these activities. All PEI Partners Forum funding is ring-fenced to go towards covering the operational costs of running events and campaigning activities separate from our projects and core costs. These contributions form the foundations needed to build a movement for science in Africa, providing creative and innovative environments to share knowledge and promote collaboration.

Next year we are committed to expanding this Forum and its activities, online and offline, and to be an ever-constant catalyst for African and international governments to achieve progress. We hope you can be part of that and greatly look forward to working with.
